The Europe of Peoples and Cultures: From the Thought of De Gasperi and Otto of Habsburg to Modern Cultural Districts

Friday, May 30th - Trieste, Miramare Castle 14.30- 18.00 p.m.

Presentation

The plurality of peoples who inhabit the European continent and the plurality of cultures that have settled there, composing the European identity, cannot be reduced to a single dimension or a single root.

As Umberto Eco observed, "the language of Europe is translation", that is, the process of moving from one language to another, from one culture to another, giving life to a plural identity.

Alcide De Gasperi, Otto of Habsburg in building Europe, having suffered the evils of nationalism and totalitarianism, longed to build a society of peace, aware of the value of difference as a common enrichment. This memory must not be lost: we need to build a strong cultural pillar, where new tools and perspectives can find space, such as cultural districts.

Areas of significant historical-cultural interest that, starting from people, places and knowledge, can represent a concrete example of a European artistic and cultural identity, capable of creating value for the entire community.

Followed by a convivial meeting and concert
